This self-health assessment scan has been developed as per the guidelines laid down by WHO

Neuberg Diagnostics Private Limited, a StartUp in the PathLab chain segment has announced a COVID-19 self-assessment test on its website, wherein one just needs to answer a few questions to know whether she / he needs to get in touch with a doctor.

This self-health assessment scan has been developed as per the guidelines laid down by WHO (World Health Organisation) & MOHFW (Ministry of Health & Family Welfare), Government of India, to help individuals assess their risk of contracting COVID-19.

Speaking on the occasion, Aishwarya Vasudevan, Chief Operating Officer, Neuberg Diagnostics Private Limited said, "Given the present scenario, where the entire world is combating a fast-spreading deadly virus, a tool like this will help people at large to understand their risk and will help reduce the panic amongst them considering a fever or cough may be just a seasonal flu or fever."

"We urge people to take the COVID-19 self-assessment test on our website, this will help remove any doubts and to ensure safety for themselves and their near & dear ones. At the same time, it must be noted that this tool is not a replacement of an expert medical advice and it is always advisable to consult a doctor in case of any symptoms," she added.

Basis the self-assessment, one may decide if she / he needs to get in touch with a doctor.
