Unveils path breaking medical wearable Vyana in partnership with Varanium Cloud

Mumbai-based QMS MAS (Medical Allied Services), a front-runner in the field of healthcare and wellness, has made its maiden foray into the direct-to-consumer sector, launching a vast range of point-of-care products under the banner Q Devices.

The event was graced by the presence of legendary cricketer, Kapil Dev and Bollywood star, Esha Deol.

The event also witnessed the unveiling of a revolutionary medical wearable, Vyana in collaboration with Mumbai-based startup Varanium Cloud. Vyana aims to address a growing need of having a medical wearable that aids timely assistance and it has been designed to constantly monitor vital parameters and send instant notifications as well as contact the user and their emergency contacts directly in case of significant fluctuations, thereby making it a must use for high risk groups.

An array of medical devices was launched under the umbrella of Q Devices ranging from multifunction fingertip health monitors, mesh nebulisers, personal massagers, tubular mattresses with compressors, automatic blood pressure monitors, digital thermometers, powered suction pumps and nano steamers.
